SENTENCE MAN TO TERM IN JAIL FOR ATTACK ON GIRL

Robert Miller, Milford Township, Given 3 Months to One Year

WEAVER ON PROBATION

Other Court Cases Are Decided by County Judges

DOYLESTOWN, Dec. 20.—Robert Miller, 18, of Milford township, who was convicted a week ago of a statutory charge brought by the parents of a 13-year-old girl, was sentenced yesterday to serve a sentence of three months to one year in the Bucks County Prison and to pay the costs. Sentence was pronounced by Judge Hiram H. Keller, the jury, in their verdict, having recommended mercy for Miller.

Judge Calvin S. Boyer presented Harry Weaver, 19, of Quarryville, with a very acceptable Christmas present when he released Weaver on probation for a period of three years. Last week, Weaver, together with a boy friend, Leon Hershey, of Lancaster, pleaded guilty to stealing an automobile belonging to Charles Happ, of Doylestown, while the car was parked in front of the Catholic church.

Hershey was sentenced last week to the Huntingdon Reformatory by Judge Boyer, who informed him that in his opinion, he was the one who suggested the car theft.

"I have had some letters from your home district and I am inclined to give you a chance," Judge Boyer said to Weaver this morning. "I'll send you home for Christmas. You have had a taste of 20 days in jail and you say you do not like it. Behave yourself when you go back home and you will hear no more from this court, but if you misbehave, you will be brought back and sent away for a long sentence."

Judge Keller granted a rule upon the school district of Hilltown township and the school directors, to show cause why a change of venue should not be granted by the court in the civil suit that is pending in the case of Marshall Hughes, of Reading, an architect, against the school directors of the township, Harvey H. Baum, Albert F. Brown, Charles E. Wiley, H. Warren Moyer and Arthur B. Moyer.

The petition for the change of venue was presented by Hughes' attorney, who stated to the court that because of wide publicity given the affairs of the Hilltown township school board in recent court cases, that a fair trial would not be possible in Bucks county. The attorney suggested that the case be tried in Montgomery county. Hughes was an architect who it is alleged, was hired to prepare plans for a school building in Hilltown township. Judge Keller made the rule returnable January 8th.

The court announced that the trial list for the January term of civil and equity court will be called January 2.

In the matter of the recount of the vote of the last general election in Yardley Borough, the court this morning made the rule absolute and declared Francis B. Barnett, Democratic candidate for school director, elected over James E. Groome, Republican candidate for the same office for a six-year term, and directed that a certificate of election be issued to Barnett.

Counsel for Mr. Groome was in court and announced that it was Mr. Groome's wish that Barnett be seated as a result of the recount of the vote in court recently. The recount showed that Barnett's vote was 257 while Groome's vote was 253.

It was reported today that a petition of the electors of Falls township, Upper District, to open the ballot boxes of the election held on November 7, 1933, will be withdrawn.

DELINQUENTS OWE DOYLESTOWN $9400

Total of $7000 Due for Water Rent and $2400 for Sewers

URGE THE COLLECTION

DOYLESTOWN, Dec. 20.—Delinquent water and sewer rents in Doylestown amount to $9,400, it was announced Monday night at the meeting of Borough Council. The water rents, many of them long past due, amount to $7,000 while the delinquent sewer rents amount to $2,400.

Council members admitted that if they had the $9,400 in the treasury at the present time the year 1933 could be closed out as near financially perfect as it would be for and Council to conduct the housekeeping affairs of a borough the size of Doylestown.

A lengthy discussion took place when the lists of delinquents were produced at the Council meeting. Members were opposed to adding an extra 10 per cent fine on the bills at this time, because some of the delinquency is the direct result of economic conditions of the past year or more.

Council finally passed a motion authorizing the water and finance committees to appoint a collector, and that notices be sent out to all delinquents, notifying them that the 10 per cent penalty will be waived by Council if bills are paid by January 15, 1934, but that if bills are not paid by that time, the accounts will be placed in the hands of a collector and the 10 per cent penalty added to the bill.

Upon motion by Councilman Joseph A. Steelman, following a discussion of the proposition, it was moved that Council make the necessary application, immediately, to the Civic Works Administrator of Bucks County for the necessary funds to extend a water line to Doylestown Annex, to include all the money for the labor on the job in addition to $1500 toward the material for the project.

An application had previously been placed with the Civic Works Administrator for the same project, but Council members were informed that the application would be turned down because the CWA will not supply material in excess of 25 per cent of the labor costs. The original application was for $8000 material and $6000 labor.

Christmas Story Will Be Unfolded As Mother Reads To Her Children

CHRIST CHILD'S GIFTS

Cantata, "The Real Santa Claus," Will Be Given At Harriman M. E. Church

A White Christmas Giving Pageant will be the feature of the Yuletide festival of Bristol Presbyterian Sunday School in that edifice this evening. The story is that of the fulfillment of the prophecies of the coming of the Christ, with scenes, dialogue and tableaux, accompanied by beautiful music.

The pageant is one portraying the Christmas story, beginning with the early prophecies, and extending through the period of the birth of Christ. The story is told by a mother to her children in their home on Christmas eve. She reads from her Bible, as she reads the characters mentioned appear on the platform and speak the passages that the mother is supposed to be reading. The mother keeps the story connected by reading such parts, or telling them in her own words, those that are needed to complete the meaning. Almost everything the Bible characters say is directly quoted. The parts supplied have been kept as true to the Bible meaning as possible.

Those taking part: The mother, Miss Helen Nichols; the father, Russell DeLong; the grown son, Marvin Skeath; the daughter, Virginia Vetter; small son, B. Nichols; the prophets—Moses, Henry C. Streeter; David, Wayne Warner; Isaiah, Charles Frey; Jeremiah, Winfield Herman; Ezekiel, Ralph Neitzel; Micah, Robert Ruehl; Zachariah, Gene Nichols; the wise men—Belshazzar, Elwyn Neitzel; Melchior, Leonard Herman; Gaspar, Charles Brodie; Herod, Harry Hinman; the scribe, B. At the conclusion of the pageant gifts of fruit, canned goods, vegetables—all packages in white—will be taken as gifts to the Christ Child. There will be a visit of Santa Claus with a bag for all children up to nine years of age.

A cantata is to be presented at the Harriman M. E. Church by members of the Sunday School, tomorrow evening at 7.30 o'clock. The title is "The Real Santa Claus."

The cantata is the story of a Santa Claus who masquerades as a tramp in order to teach to children the

NEXT CONGRESS WILL BE $6,000,000,000 ONE

Enormous Amount Needed To Provide for Running Expenses of Gov't.

SOME FOR "NEW DEAL"

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 20.—The Congress that meets two weeks from today will be asked to provide, and it probably will, a sum approximating $6,000,000,000 to finance the government for the next fiscal year. It will be a $6,000,000,000 Congress.

This enormous amount will provide for the ordinary running expenses of government now estimated at about $2,600,000,000 and to insure the various recovery phases of the "new deal" being continued well into 1935. There is to be no retreating on any of the fronts from which the administration has been directing the recovery drive. Instead of retreating, the plan is to advance and with more ammunition in the form of Federal dollars, to press the attack.

A White House Conference which lasted far into last night evolved the estimates of what Congress is to be called upon to provide.

The Reconstruction Finance Corporation is to be given another billion as it now has just about enough cash to carry it until Congress meets. The Public Works Administration is to be granted between one and a half and two billions to carry on. Its funds too are almost exhausted and there are some three billions of dollars worth of projects still pending.

The Civil Works Administration, which has taken 4,000,000 people off charity and put them on Federal payrolls in the past six weeks, is to be given $250,000,000 more. Another quarter billion will be asked for continuation of direct Federal relief. Odds and ends of the recovery program, such as the administrative expenses of the N. R. A., the Home Owners Loan Corporation and others, will take care of some of other millions. It all foots up to an estimated $6,000,000,000, give or take $100,000,000 or so either way.

MAIL RUSH NOW ON AT POST OFFICE HERE

Two Deliveries To Be Made Saturday But None Sunday

MAIL CARDS NOW

The Christmas rush is on at the Bristol post office and the mail carriers and office clerks are burdened with packages, parcels, letters and cards.

Each train arriving here brings added bags of mail and the post office floor is beginning to look like Christmas.

Mailing should be done early this year due to the fact that Christmas comes on Monday. There will be two deliveries on Saturday but none on Sunday or Monday. Unless mail matter is mailed tomorrow or Friday, it will run a chance of being held-up in the Bristol office over the Christmas holidays.

Each year mailing of Christmas cards is being done earlier than was the custom a few years ago. This has done much to relieve the last minute rush at the post offices.

THE CHRISTMAS TOP

By Greta Drumm

Curled on my couch, in the dim glow, I watched the shadows come and go— Watched patiently, as children do, To see if Santa Claus was true!

Almost my eyes had closed in sleep When faint, I thought I heard the creep Of footsteps near the fireplace— My eyes flew wide to see 'his' face.

Santa? Oh, no, 'twas not the queer Bearded old man I saw appear, But strangely, in the firelight glow, I saw my grandpa's features grow.

No fear I knew, though he has been Away so long—three years have seen Christmas without his kindly smile— But watch—lie still and wait awhile!

He lifts a bag, brown, tied with string, And rests it on the table wing— He strokes his chin, smiles, sweetly gay— I knew he came from worlds away.

Out of the bag came misty things, Danced in the light, a top that sings, And oh! Dear grandpa, what is that? A football, and a baseball bat!

Lovely the packages appear, The wrappings white and finely sheer, The ribbons glow with silvery ray, They too, come from far worlds away.

At last he walks toward the stair And stands a moment listening there, A little wistful is his smile, He does not see me watch the while.

Suddenly sleep shuts my eyes, Morning comes with gay surprise, "Christmas" we cry, our dreams forgot, And I am gayest of the lot.

With evening comes the still, blue light, The lovely peace of Christmas night: Lo! I abandon earthly things, And play with that small top that sings.

Of worlds on worlds we do not ken, Of love that knows no word nor pen, That lives, whatever we believe, And comes to earth on Christmas eve!

NEWTOWN BANK NOT TO RENT PROPERTY FOR RUM SHOP

Directors Vote To Refuse To Lease Property To State

PETITION IS CIRCULATED

Churches and the Society of Friends Fight The Plan

NEWTOWN, Dec. 20.—The location of a liquor store here is somewhat of an uncertainty since the residents have launched a vigorous protest and the owner of the site picked for the location has refused to lease the property for the purpose.

The Pennsylvania Liquor Control Board selected this borough as one of four places in Bucks County in which to locate a State liquor store. The site was later selected as 34 and 36 South State street. The property is owned by the First National Bank and Trust Company.

Previous to the naming of the location but few residents knew just what the nature of a liquor store would be. They later learned that liquor would be sold at retail and then a protest went up from the residents.

The churches and the Society of Friends combined and a petition was circulated on Monday. In one day nearly 300 residents signed the protest and petitioned the State not to locate a liquor store in the borough.

The directors of the First National Bank and Trust Company met and voted to refuse to rent the property for liquor store purposes.

In the petition it was set forth that this borough is one of the oldest settlements in the State. Next year it will celebrate its 250th anniversary. The town was founded by William Penn.

The petition said that a liquor store would attract to the borough a type of people not desired by the residents here. It would attract liquor purchasers from a wide area, the other three stores being located at Bristol, Doylestown and Perkasie.

It was said that the borough would also be required to maintain a police force.

In pre-prohibition times there were two hotels located here. The Old Brick Hotel and White Hall.

In the petition it is also set forth that the town is a religious center and the location of George School there with 350 students would make the location of a liquor store there undesirable.

Those favoring the location of a liquor store here argue that the petition was signed by but a small proportion of the residents and that at the last election those in favor of repeal outnumbered the dries by 100.

The campaign against the liquor store is under the leadership of the Society of Friends, the First Presbyterian, Methodist and Baptist Churches.

Solicitors include the Rev. Jacob Avery Long, the Rev. Frederick W. Gutbub, the Rev. W. A. Hawley, Ira Atkinson, Miss Emily I. Packer, Leroy Suber and Reuben P. Kester.

BULGARIANS TAKE 5 DAYS TO PREPARE FOR X'MAS

SOFIA, Bulgaria, Dec. 20.—(INS)—All Bulgarian Christians today are putting their houses in order, whitewashing their walls inside and out, trimming their gardens, and repairing their "Sunday best" clothes for the coming feast of the Nativity.

For on St. Ignace's Day, December 20, Bulgaria's preparation for Christmas starts in earnest. According to old tradition, the pangs of childbirth of "Bojia Maika" (the Mother of God), began five days before the delivery of "Mlada Boga" (the New-Born God). Therefore the period of her labor is considered a particularly hallowed one, to be commemorated in holy fashion by all the professed followers of her son.

To be a true Christian, the Bulgarian deems that during the coming five days he must put his heart as well as his house in order. Therefore he must forgive and forget all his real or imaginary grievances against his neighbors during the year now drawing to a close.

Touching scenes of reconciliation are to be witnessed not only in the peasant villages but in the large towns and cities. In every home callers are awaited, and upon the character of the first visitor, or even upon the nature of the first animal or bird to cross the threshold, depends the auspicious beginning of the year to come.

If a repentant and formerly disgruntled neighbor turns up for his beg-pardon call in a drunken or dirty condition, that is considered a bad omen; but few do appear that way. If the first caller, as is usually the case, comes hat in hand with a smile on his countenance, it is considered an excellent augury for 1934.

Similarly, a lamb (symbol of the Saviour), sheep, ox, cow, dove or hen straying across the cottage threshold on December 20 is supposed to be a welcome sign. But not so with a goat, pig

THE TABLES TURNED

Have the railroads finally turned the tables on the bus companies?

For the last decade the railroads have been charging the bus companies with being unfair competitors as they have seen their own passenger business dwindle almost to the vanishing point. Now it is the bus companies that are making this charge against the rail lines.

Their complaint grows out of the recent action of southern railroads in reducing their passenger rates. In connection with the calling of a special meeting of the National Association of Motor Bus Operators to consider the situation, a statement was given out declaring that "the only way our bus companies can survive this vicious attack is by being relieved of the motor bus code and so, by reducing operating expenses to a minimum, be in a position to compete with the railroads on more nearly equal terms."

It will be difficult for the public to expend much sympathy on the bus companies. During the entire period that the latter have been taking business from the railroads by hauling passengers at cheaper rates than the railroads, the latter not only were subject to hampering regulations which did not apply to their competitors but they also had to pay for the maintenance of their lines while the busses operated over highways built with public funds and largely maintained in the same way.

The present rate war may have the desirable effect, from the public standpoint, of hastening the development of some satisfactory plan of coordination which will permit both systems to function profitably and in a way which will be of greatest benefit to the public. If so, it will have served a good purpose.

HIGH COST OF BAD HEALTH

Louis I. Dublin, health statistician, asserts that the total economic value of human beings in the United States—their revenue-producing value—is about 1,500 billion dollars, as opposed to all material and animal wealth in the country of 321 billion dollars.

He asserts that the economic loss by preventable deaths is 6 billion dollars yearly, while 244 are lost through illness sufficient to incapacitate the sick from working.

It is clear, without raising the question of humanity, much less sentimentality, that public money spent for health protection and education will be repaid many times over by reducing unnecessary deaths and sickness.

BAKED SPARERIBS

APPETIZING DISH

Why not "feature" apples in the luncheon you serve your bridge guests? And in the menu which is composed of Baked Spareribs with Apple Rings, Mashed or Baked Potatoes, Fresh Rye Bread and Butter, Apple Charlotte and Coffee they are served twice.

The recipes for the spareribs and dessert follow:

Baked Spare Ribs with Apple Rings—Rub surface of spareribs with flour, salt and pepper and place in baking dish. Arrange apple rings around spareribs. In each, put one tablespoon of brown sugar and one teaspoon of vinegar. Add boiling water just to cover bottom of dish. Bake for about 45 minutes in a hot oven, 400 degrees Fahrenheit.

Apple Charlotte—One tablespoon gelatin, one-fourth cup cold water, one cup sugar, two tablespoons lemon juice, one cup apple sauce, three egg whites, lady fingers, salt, one-half cup boiling water. Custard—One quart milk, four egg yolks, flavoring, sugar salt to taste. If custard is not quite thick enough, moisten a spoonful of cornstarch and add. Soak gelatin and dissolve in boiling water; add sugar, lemon juice and apple sauce. When mixture begins to thicken beat until light and add stiffly-beaten egg whites. Put in mold lined with lady fingers. To serve, put a spoonful of custard in bottom of cup, add charlotte and a bit of lemon juice and apple sauce. When of custard on top.

HOLLYWOOD, CAL.

Add Colleen Moore to the feminine stars whose contracts guarantee them time off to be just a wife.

Profiting by her M. G. M. experience which kept her idle on the Coast for so long, Colleen had made R. K. O. put in writing that she can go back to New York for three months as soon as she finishes "Success Story."

She did it so she can spend part of the year with Al Scott, her broker husband, whose business keeps him in the East.

Colleen is now the third star to retain this right for commuting love. Irene Dunn recently won R. K. O.'s permission to live in New York and to receive two weeks' notice on her picture. Aline MacMahon long has had an agreement with Warner Brothers that she can fly back East at regular intervals to visit her architect husband, Clarence Stein.

The big question in Hollywood these days is whether Greta Garbo's romance or friendship with Rouben Mamoulian will be the final means of bringing the Swedish star out of her seclusion.

For the second time in a week, Greta dined in public last Friday. She and Mamoulian occupied an unobtrusive table at the Russian Eagle Cafe, colorful rendezvous which is guarded by a tall doorman in Cossack uniform.

And this not all. The Swedish star attended both previews of her new picture, "Queen Christina." If you don't think that a concession, it was the first time that La Garbo had seen one of her own previews since the silent days.

Upon opening a box from South America last week, John Barrymore was shocked to come upon two shrunken and mummified human heads.

KNAVE'S GIRL

By

JOAN CLAYTON

COPYRIGHT 1932, KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, INC.

CHAPTER THIRTY-ONE

Her heart beat clamorously; her mind went back across the months to Bill McGee. Someone had broken in. Was it he? For a moment, fright held her motionless. Then she sprang from bed and snatched at a negligee. Slipping into the darkened hall, she made her way swiftly, noiselessly, toward Haverholt's suite. She dared not knock. She opened his door and whispered loudly, "Julian, Julian."

There was no answer. The room was entirely black. The girl hesitated at the threshold.

"Julian, Julian." She stepped over his threshold, groped across his sitting room to his bedroom door. A light was burning in the bedroom but Haverholt was not there. Had he heard the noise? Had he ventured downstairs to investigate? What was happening?

She tried to convince herself that there was a logical, reasonable explanation for his absence. It was Julian whom she had heard. He had wanted something downstairs. At four o'clock in the morning? No, that was not possible. Something terrible was happening. All at once she was hysterically sure of it.

Suddenly she turned and started for the stairs, forcing herself down, step by step in utter darkness. She had reached the last step when light gushed from the living room into the foyer, as the curtains parted narrowly. Patricia stopped, stopped dead at the sound of Julian Haverholt's calm, unhurried voice. She understood everything then, all at once.

Haverholt was saying, "This way, my dear."

The girl on the stairs heard from beyond the curtains another girl's soft, excited laugh. Patricia whirled. There was no time. They would see her, they were bound to see her. Instinct more than reason carried her to the giant tapestry that hung from ceiling to floor. She darted behind it. The cloth, dusty folds closed around her just as the others advanced into the foyer. Stuffing her fingers into her ears, Patricia waited, longing to escape, longing to be anywhere but here.

She was torn by shock and jealousy and shame. So this was Julian Haverholt. She had known his reputation from the first. Now she realized that she had never believed those gossips' tales. She believed them now.

With horror she recalled the day, her own fluttered feelings, her half yielding. She had been on the point of surrendering to this philanderer who had asked for her love in the afternoon and who had satisfied himself with her successor at night. The bang of a door cut through her misery.

"You may come out now, Patricia," called Julian Haverholt. "I'm alone now."

Patricia did not stir. She pressed back and back against the wall. The man himself crossed the foyer, pulled the tapestry aside and faced her. She refused to meet his eyes.

"After all," he said gently, "the world hasn't ended."

She said in lifeless tones, "I'm sorry, I thought someone had broken into the house." She lifted her eyes now. They were lifeless too. She said, "I should never have been so naive, should I, Julian?"

"I don't know what you're talking about," he said flatly. "I'm sorry if you were frightened. Bill Tevis telephoned, he was drunk, he needed money to pay a taxi bill. I told him to come around, that's

The girl on the stairs heard from beyond the curtains another girl's soft, excited laugh.

He was not lying to convince her. He knew that she knew the truth. He lied deliberately to save the situation and both their faces. She could pretend if she chose. By accepting that lie she might salvage her own pride and such dignity as she could muster from the ruins of her regard for him.

She stared at the floor. A square of lace and linen lay there, white against the mellow green of the rug. Haverholt's midnight visitor had dropped her handkerchief. The man looked down too. He stooped, picked up the handkerchief and thrust it in his pocket. His expression did not change by the flicker of an eyelash. He said nothing.

Suddenly the girl turned and fled up the stairs. She slammed her bedroom door, flung herself prone on the bed and began to sob.

They talked it out in the morning, Julian and Patricia, the girl determined to punish him for the humiliation she had suffered, the man, unwilling to discuss the matter at all, self-controlled, utterly unrepentant. There was no pretence now of a man friend who had called late. Still in Haverholt's eyes the tragedy of the episode lay in Patricia's appearance upon the scene the night before. He blamed her sharply. Very foolish of her to start on a burglar-hunt, foolish and unfortunate; yes, he would admit it was unfortunate. He would admit nothing else.

"What do you expect me to do?" he asked, looking at her coldly and remotely. "Apologize? Why should I? Why should I apply on my knees for forgiveness? I'm a free agent."

"I didn't say that you weren't free."

"You are thinking it though. You women are all alike. If a man shows sentimental interest in you, thereafter he becomes your property. You want to do all the binding and not be bound yourself. A beautiful theory, Patricia, but it won't work. I'm not your property."

Yesterday afternoon you denied all claims on me. I remember, even if you don't."

"Do you think I'm jealous?" She flung it at him hotly.

"I think you're damned impertinent, that's what I think. I'm not answerable to you for my actions. You have no right to meddle in my life unless I give you the right. I don't. The sooner you realize that the better we will get along."

Her face went pale at the rebuke. She swallowed it. She had to. He was right and she was wrong. Long ago her father had said to her, "Never ask questions, Patricia, if you can't bear the answers." She had asked such questions. The answers had been unbearable. They showed her up to herself and to Haverholt, as a jealous, suspicious, nagging girl, greedily trying to eat her cake and have it, too.

She felt cheap and baffled and resentful. There had been some justice on her side; there must be. Nevertheless, Haverholt had come out of the situation with flying colors. In his own mind he was vindicated, was entirely the injured party. She was to blame for meddling in his affairs, for appointing herself, unasked, the guardian of his morals and actions. Certainly she was to blame, partially. Still he was not entitled to so complete a triumph. Patricia longed to rob him of it.

It was not that she cared, so she argued. She might have seemed jealous. She was not, not really. Let Julian Haverholt behave in the future as he chose! What she wanted to do was to shatter his colossal self-satisfaction, to make him see himself as he really was. He was utterly lacking in honor. Useless to remind him of that. She could shake him though, if she could prove that he had no dignity, no taste! She sought to formulate the phrases in her mind and failed.

THOUGHTS and THINGS

THE business of living, when boiled down and all the froth skimmed off, is just a matter of thinking.

Each of us is continually thinking ideas of our own and swapping them for the ideas of others. If there is a famine of outside ideas we shrivel up ourselves. Children with "nobody to play with" are unhappy and unmanageable.

From thinking with our heads to doing with our hands is but a little step and then our thoughts become things.

It is because men of America are so unfettered in their thinking and doing that this country is such a fine place to live in. It is also because these thoughts are freely radiated and spread broadcast, in the distribution of manufactured things and in the distribution of the facts about them (advertising), that this country is such a fine place to live in.

The originator of an idea is not much better off than before he originated it till he gets some one else to absorb it and enjoy it and benefit by it.

The man or woman surrounded by better thoughts and things but who pays not the slightest attention to them is not much better off than the one with "nobody to play with."

The advertisements in the papers are thoughts—telling you about the things that other men and women have created for your happiness. Read the ads. They are the voices from hundreds of thousands of looms, shops, foundries, studios, laboratories

TRAINS ACCEPTED AFTER A STRUGGLE FOR RECOGNITION

By Nadia De Beaud
(I. N. S. Fashion Correspondent)

PARIS—(INS)—There is no doubt that trains have really been accepted this season after struggling for recognition for several years. They are short, as I have noticed, and scanty, but they are in vogue.

At a gala dinner at Ciro's, the Honorable Mrs. Holman, daughter of Lord Tyrell, the British Ambassador, wore a dark blue Lelong gown of rosalia with steel sequins woven into the material, close fitting with a train. Her coat was in velvet of the same shade abundantly trimmed with blue fox.

Lady Abingdon also had a train on a Patou model of pale blue crepe, the décolleté of which was high in front, and, in the back, open to the waist with a little bow. I noted a Callot gown in green "velours sauvage," close fitting with long sleeves and the little train. Pheasant feathers curled over the arms from the elbows to the wrists most effectively.

YEAR'S REVIEW OF THE MINOR SPORTS

NEW YORK, Dec. 20—(INS)—For some mysterious reason certain of our games are listed under the head of minor sports, although at least one of them, polo, considered from any angle is as great a sport as the world has to offer and another, soccer, draws more spectators than any other game played.

Several of these so-called minor sports have grown amazing in popularity the last few years and the year just ending was no exception. Soccer and Polo, for instance, had more players and teams than ever before and it is only a question of time until the colleges all will list them among the major sports.

Wrestling

It's hard to say what was the outstanding event of the mat world in 1933, but surely the greatest surprise to the public was Joe Savoldi's disputed decision over Jim Londos. Despite this defeat, Londos still is considered the world's champion in several states. Jim Browning, who threw everybody all year, is recognized in eleven states and Ed Don George, conqueror of Henri De Glane, holds the title in other parts of the country.

The grunt and groan fraternity grew by leaps and bounds this year. Jack Curley, the wrestling impresario, rounded up all the college football huskies he could induce to the mat and it was not unusual for the boys to toss each other around every night of the week. Wrestling, especially the professional variety, probably never will be taken seriously in this country, but at least it has a tremendous popular appeal.

Polo

The outstanding polo event of 1933 was the East-West series played at Chicago which the West, led by Cecil Smith, won. There was no international series this year but the Chicago event made the country more polo-conscious than any international test might have done.

The Aurora team, composed of Gerry, Mills, Knox and Boeske, beat Greentree for the U. S. Open championship and the Akhusti team won the junior title. Princeton carried off intercollegiate honors and Tommy Hitchcock continued as the only 10-goal player in the world.

Soccer

More people throughout the world attend soccer games than any other sport. The game grew tremendously in this country this year. Schools, high schools and colleges took it up in increasing numbers but the pro ranks were hard hit by the depression.

The U. S. pro title was won by the Stix-Baer-Muller team, of the St. Louis Pro League, which beat the N. Y. Americans, of the American soccer league, for the title.

The first German-American football team, of Philadelphia, trimmed the McKnight's Beverage team, of Pittsburgh, for the national amateur title.

Pennsylvania University and the U. S. Naval Academy were ranked co-holders of the intercollegiate championship.

CARNERA MATCHED FOR FIGHT WITH LOUGHRAN

By Davis J. Walsh
(I. N. S. Sports Editor)

NEW YORK, Dec. 20—(INS)—Some what belatedly and by devious channels, announcement has been made today that Primo Carnera, who looks like something that climbed down out of a tree, and Tommy Loughran, the handsome Harry of this comical profession, are officially matched to fight fifteen rounds for the heavyweight championship. The time will be February 22; the place, Miami, Fla.

Although it is not generally known at this hour, Louis Sorel accepted terms for Carnera by trans-Atlantic telephone late last week. Mr. Sorel is the man who was detailed by a bank to look after the fighter's petty cash. Now the fighter has the petty cash and Sorel has the fighter. He is at present in Rome, looking after Mussolini.

In case Carnera wins, he will be available for a second defense of the title against Max Baer here in June, provided Madison Square Garden is able to woo Maximillion away from John Dempsey, the insurgent promoter, with fair words and fond promises. In case Loughran wins, he already is committed to the Garden on a one-year lease. The terms of the match call for Carnera to take 37½ percent and Loughran 12½. The ticket prices will be $2, $5 and $10. It will be the first heavyweight championship fight in the history of Florida, provided something can be done to take the "bowser" off the Florida law against championship fights.

So much for all available testimony, now bearing upon the situation. It furnishes a reasonably complete picture of what will be written and recounted within the next twenty-four hours but it does not tell the story of Tommy Loughran, who was blown over by a punch in the Sharkey fight at one of the ball parks. They said he was through then and that was four years ago.

It even seemed as though he must be, for he fought indifferently thereafter and finally was knocked out by Steve Hamas at the Garden. This time, they said, it positively was the end. But that was two years ago, whereas today Loughran has come back to beat the men who beat him, dropping Sharkey with a punch in the tenth round and winning impressively in fifteen. The last time out, they were going to stop the fight and give it to Pray Impellittere, but Loughran protested violently and to such purpose that, pityingly, they allowed it to go on. Whereat, he poked Impellittere's eyes out and, at the finish, not only got the decision of the judges but that of the referee who was going to stop it to save him from further punishment.

Even these are only a few jagged lines in the sketch of the man who may be the next heavyweight champion. He is old now and he never saw the day when he could punch hard enough to make a derby into a fedora. He will give away upward of 75 pounds in this fight. Most of his stamina has been left back there along the trail of the years. Weight-making, while champion of the light heavyweight class, didn't hold a great deal. Terrific brannigans with Walker, with Schaaf, Martin Burke and others didn't help at all. Yet he'll always have something that other men lack.

Perhaps the scene in the taxicab as he rode back from the Sharkey disaster will fit a few pieces into the mosaic.

"I'll get Sharkey again," he said, over and over. "I'll be heavyweight champion yet."

The words had the monotony of a requiem, cutting through the silence of the others and beating against the senses like an ache. Nobody believed him then but it didn't matter. The point is that he believed himself.

Can you do this in 2 minutes?

How good are you at figures?

Here's an easy one to work out. But before you do it, we might as well tell you that scores of your neighbors already know the answer!

Take out your pencil, and turn this page around so that the line at the left is horizontal instead of vertical. Place your pencil on the figure 1. Draw a straight line from 1 to 2. Continue the line from 2 to 3, from 3 to 4, and so on to the end. Don't stop until you've reached 75!

When the last line is drawn, you'll have the answer to all your winter heating problems!

NOW, while your mind is still on figures, think about another simple problem.

You burn in your furnace, let us say, ten tons of fuel a year—maybe more, maybe less. That represents quite a sum of money. You want to cut down on it wherever possible.

Suppose, by changing to another fuel, you could make nine and one-half tons do the work of ten! Suppose, too, that you would actually pay out for the new fuel from five to ten per cent less money!

Customers say that Koppers Coke saves them one dollar in every ten on the yearly fuel bill—because of these two reasons.

That's arithmetic worth doing. When you add to it the facts that Koppers yields one-third the usual amount of ashes, is cleaner, lighter, easier to regulate, and needs less attention, then the sum total is thrifty plus comfort. Try this modern fuel in your furnace! Made by Rainey-Wood Coke Co., Conshohocken, Pa.

NEW faces dominated the 1933 golf horizon, as far as most of the major championships were concerned. The British Open, most famed of links classics, was won by the slim black-haired Denny Shute. This was Shute's first triumph in a major golf classic.

The likeable Denny, a modest, retiring chap, topped the world's best professionals at St. Andrews last summer. He finished in a tie with another youthful star, Craig Wood of Deal, N. J., at the end of the gruelling British competition, and romped off with the coveted honors in the play-off.

The 1932 U. S. open went to an other youngster coming through, with his first major triumph, when Johnny Goodman of Omaha led a notable field last June. The pink-checked Omaha shot-maker was the first amateur to snatch the open title away from the pros since Bobby Jones's glorious reign.

Goodman met Denny Shute, in a special match at Miami early this month. This contest between the U. S. and British titleholders was labelled as a "World's Championship" affair, and "Mister Shute" succeeded to vindicate his pro supremacy by hand-icating the ambitious Omaha ace a sound trouncing.

The 1933 National Amateur was won by a young New Yorker, George Dunlap, who triumphed over a field which included the nation's best amateurs, including the favored Goodman.

The British Amateur went to an old stager by the name of Michael Scott, who was hardly expected to beat out the leading British amateur linksman.

Gene Sarazen, the old reliable, managed to grab himself one pretty good title by copping the P. G. A. competition. Although he failed to win either of the big open classics this year, the stocky Italian is still rated by those who know as the best competitor on the links.
